New Albany, Indiana.

(ILLUSTRATED.)

NEW ALBANY, INDIANA, is situated on the Ohio River. It is on the dividing line between the North and South and is near the center of population in the United States. It is easy of access and its railroads radiating in all directions make it unexcelled as a distributing point. Four through railroad lines on the north side of the river and six on the south side give competition in all directions.

Its numerous manufactories are evidence of its advantages. New Albany has Electric Street Cars, Gas Works, Two Electric Light Companies, Water Works, with natural pressure of 80 pounds, Numerous Churches, a splendid Public School System, Parochial Schools, Music Schools and Business College, afford all necessary educational advantages. The streets are well paved and shaded. Circling the City are the Silver Hills, two hundred feet above the City reached by drives and by an Electric Railway. On the Hills are the Water Works Reservoir, Suburban Residences and the view is noted far and wide for its beauty. From the hill tops can be seen New Albany, Louisville, the Ohio River with its boats, bridges, islands and the valleys for miles around.
